LITERATURE.

Harper's Magazine.

Harper's Magazine for October is a strong number from every point of view. It is important, attractive, and richly illustrated.

Mr. C. H. Farnham concludes his interesting account, impressively and beautifully illustrated, of his canoe trip along the coast of Labrador. Wm. Hamilton Gibson contributes an instructive paper, entitled "Backyard Studies," with five charming illustrations. In the series of "Great American Industries" the third paper treats of hop-growing and the manufacture of malt liquors, and is amply illustrated. George Parsons Lathrop describes the city of Hartford, giving especial attention to the "Nook Farm" literary group, consisting of Mark Twain, Charles Dudley Warner, and Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. The article is profusely illustrated.

After a long interval we have another installment of Goldsmith's play, "The Stoops to Conquer" (nearly all of Act II.), with thirteen illustrations by E. A. Abbey, one of which is the frontispiece to the number.

In fiction we have the very best in Miss Woolson's "East Angels" and Howells' "Indian Summer." There are also two good short stories—"A Priest of Doorga" by Phil Robinson, and "A Puritan Indeed" by Mary Gray Morrison. The latter is illustrated by Dietman.

Mr. Veeder B. Paine contributes a timely and important article exposing the defects in the past conduct of our public land policy and indicating methods of reform. Mr. T. S. Van Dyke's article on "Mexican Politics," among other things, draws attention to the recent awakening of the Mexican Congress and its assumption of a position independent of executive control, and is illustrated with portraits of President Diaz and two prominent parliamentary leaders.

It is a matter of curious interest that two of the poems in this number—"When Evening Cometh On," by Robert Burns, Wilson, and "When Day Meets Night," by Charles W. Coleman, Jr., treat the same subject, and are both by Southern authors, a Kentuckian and a Virginian. R. D. Blackmore, the celebrated novelist, contributes a pleasing bit of verse, entitled "Dimidium Facti," and Margaret Deland is represented by another of her quaint and characteristic poems, entitled "The Message of the Rose."

In the Editor's Easy Chair are two letters written by Thomas Carlyle to the Hon. Beverley Tucker in 1846 and 1850, and here published for the first time. One of these, treating of the anti-slavery agitation, is the most important and characteristic of Mr. Carlyle's letters that has been brought to light since his death.

The other Editorial Departments are well sustained, including a first-rate Editor's Drawer.

New York: Harper & Brothers; Salt Lake: James Dwyer.

THE PRECEPTOR. Being a simple system for enabling young men to acquire a knowledge of the doctrines of the Gospel, and the ability to preach them. By Elder John Nicholas. Second edition, revised and enlarged. Salt Lake City: Deseret News Company. Price, 30c.

The character of the work is fully declared on the title page. In a circular accompanying the work, it is stated that it "is a most handy reference for quotations to sustain the doctrines of the Gospel, as understood and preached by the Latter-day Saints. The proving passages quoted are all given in full, to avoid loss of time in searching the books containing them. Special attention has been paid to the evidences in favor of the authenticity of the Book of Mormon. A condensed outline of the narrative of that record is given, together with a short account of its being brought forth through Joseph Smith. Scriptural passages are quoted; it is shown that the Book of Mormon proves its own authenticity by the fulfillment of its predictions, etc.; its position upon plural marriage is presented, showing the untenability of the assertion that it is opposed to that doctrine. Mr. Fairbanks' letter from Utah, giving an account of the finding of the Spaulding manuscript, and explaining the theory that the lost story was the foundation of the Book of Mormon, is reproduced in the Preceptor.

The affirmative and negative propositions on each subject are given, one of the chief features of the method being the setting up of an opposite to give the student a point against which to speak.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine.

For October opens with the first installment of a new serial by Fannie Aymer Mathews, entitled "Dilettante Days," a bright and taking story of travel. The three chapters given take the reader across the Atlantic, through Liverpool, Chester and Warwick; the illustrations are appropriate and truthful. The two stories, "Love's Harvest," by Farjeon, and "What She Made of her Life," by Mrs. Farmer, go on entertainingly. Two of Christ's Parables are given in that series, and Ignaz Seppel, Sigismund Feitkum and Conradin Kreutzer are sketched in the Sacred Musician series. The Bible History article treats of the Kingdom of Judah, from the fall of Samaria to the Babylonian captivity. The Reverend Edward A. Rand contributes a pleasant and readable article "An Autumn Pilgrimage," and there is a good sketch with extracts and illustrations of Tennyson's latest dramatic poem, "Becket." There are also portraits and sketches of Dr. Hasbrouck of the New Jersey Normal School; H. Archibald Walsh of Dublin; and Sir George Barrington; besides many interesting shorter articles and poems.

Published by Mrs. Frank Leslie, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York City.

North American Review.

The October number of the North American Review contains twenty-three articles by as many different contributors, among whom are an English Cardinal, an American Admiral, two American Major Generals, two American Ministers to European Courts, an American Artist, a New York Assemblyman, an ex-United States Senator, the Mayor of New York, an ex-Governor of New York, two distinguished American Men of Letters, and a famous American Financier—Manning Ammen, Ben. Butler, Fitz John Porter, Eliza B. Washburne, Wm. Waldorf Astor, (his first appearance in literature), J. B. Eastis, of Louisiana, Wm. R. Grace, of New York, Theodore Roosevelt, Horatio Seymour, E. P. Whipple, Charles T. Congdon, Dorman B. Eaton, and some others less known. There is also a very characteristic private letter from Gen. Grant to his father, written from Milliken's Bend, just two days before he started in the Vicksburg Campaign. It is contributed by Col. Fred Grant.

The New Moon.

We have received the September number of the New Moon, a magazine published at Lowell, Mass., at the very low rate of one dollar a year. Single copies ten cents. The number before us contains five stories, original and selected, and a very interesting melange of miscellaneous reading. In the different departments the editor indulges in some racy comments on current topics, and succeeds in making the whole number very interesting. The magazine is carefully edited and printed, and the tone is unexceptionable. It is for sale by all newsdealers, or specimen copy will be furnished on application at the home office at Lowell. The proof-reading is exceptionally good.

Decorator and Furnisher.

The September number of the Decorator and Furnisher is unusually excellent in its table of contents. The illuminated plate is a renaissance design for ceiling and wall of dining room. The funeral decorations of New York stores and public buildings on the occasion of General Grant's funeral are illustrated and described. The plates are numerous and artistic, and are interesting features in the department of ladies' work in decoration.

Address, Decorator and Furnisher, 30 and 32 East, Fourteenth Street, New York.

Our Little Men and Women.

As charming as anything could be is the September number of Our Little Men and Women, the pictures in which are pretty, and the sketches wholesome and instructive. This little periodical has so attached itself to the young readers that they anxiously look for its appearance from month to month.
